

Example of an Instamatic Poem

Source taken from: The News Story

27th August 2015

Written by: KIRSTIE MCCRUM, Daily Mirror

The World's first unmeltable ice cream is ready!

Ice-cream is marvellous but sticky fingers are not. Can you finish an ice-cream cone in the summer sun before it starts melting? And running between your fingers and down your arm?

A new and improved 99 flake has been developed to ensure the ice-cream withstands the heat and keeps its soft shape, without melting.

The ice-cream was created in a specialist 'innovation kitchen'. It is made using rich vanilla pods and topped with the famous Flake, but the complete recipe is being kept top-secret by the team.

My instamatic poem

Sun beating down

Splitting the stones

Salty sea, hot sand

Singing for ice-cream

Sweet, soft and tasty

Six euros please

Small bites really fast

Stopping and swallowing

Something is strange

Surprise, surprise!

No sticky fingers

Savour it slowly

So, so, so, slowly

Six euros please.

(Your poem can be shorter or longer than mine.)